Assignment:

The case study is a written assignment that allows the faculty to assess your understanding of sociology and psychology concepts of human behavior in health and illness. The assignment weightage is 60% of the Sociology and Psychology module.

Background:

Understanding the sociological background of the patients is imperative in providing effective care delivery. This can be achieved by developing a trusted nurse-patient relationship. On the other hand, stress can have important consequences for both nurses and patients. For nurses, stress can lead to burnout. Therefore, stress and coping are very important concepts in health care.

Instructions:

Your assignment should include the following:

- Content page
- Introduction
- Contents
 - Describe the terms: culture, beliefs, and values.
 - Discuss sociology aspects of the nurse-patient relationship.
 - Explain how changes in physical/cognitive/socio-emotional development influence an individual in response to stress.
 - Discuss how nurses could help themselves and others to cope with stress.
- Conclusion
- References

Assignment format:

- The length of the assignment should be approximately 2000 words.
- Use word-processed, Times New Roman, font size 12, double spacing; and justified alignment with left intended on first line of each paragraph.
- Use headings and subheadings.
- Pages should be numbered.
- Resources should be cited using the latest American Psychological Association (APA) referencing.
- Upload assignment to Turnitin. The similarity for the assignment must not be ≥15%.
- Submit a soft copy of assignment in WORD document with an assignment cover page, declaration, and comment page via E-portal according to due date given as stated in e-learning portal.
- Late submission will not be graded according to IMU examination policy.
